A Message from Management

Dear Residents,

In the most common Grant scam, the consumer will receive an unsolicited phone call from a con artist claiming that they are from the “Federal Grants Administration” or the “Federal Grants Department” neither of which exists. In other versions of this scam scammers place advertisements in the classified section of the local newspapers offering “free grants,” and will request that victims wire money for processing fees or taxes before the money can be sent to them.

Tips from <http://www.fraud.org/scams/telemarketing/government-grants>

The National Consumer League has published the following tips for consumers to avoid falling victim to a federal grant scam:

- Do not give out your bank account information to anyone you do not know. Scammers pressure people to divulge their bank account information so that they can steal the money in the account. Do not share bank account information unless you are familiar with the company and know why the information is necessary.
- Government grants are made for specific purposes, not just because someone is a good taxpayer. They also require an application process; they are not simply given over the phone. Most government grants are awarded to states, cities, schools, and nonprofit organization to help provide services or fund research projects. Grants to individuals are typically for things like college expenses or disaster relief.
- Government grants never require fees of any kind. You might have to provide financial information to prove that you qualify for a government grant, but you never have to pay to get one.
